This financing model that is frequently observed in the international financial markets is used especially by US and British banks and investment banks to attract the capital from Islamic countries to financial markets. Essentially, the company in need of financing (source company) transfers a fixed asset to the Asset Lease Company (ALC), and the ALC procures funding from national or international markets by issuing a lease certificate (sukuk-ijarah) over that fixed asset. The funds are transferred to the source company and thus fund procurement takes place.
